well organized studying literature.
Professor Kolenda does a great job in relating the learning materials to everyday life. His lessons put a real world spin on the materials which make them easily understandable and usable.
Although this class is online, the review of relevant and current articles on the subject matter is/has been beneficial to my overall understanding and discussion board interaction. The powerpoints and videos are also beneficial. It also very helpful that professor broke down the policy paper over the course, made it manageable and not overwhelming. Which increased my learning, provided guidance on what I was doing correct/incorrectly.
Professor was very communicative and responsive – course was clear, liked the Voicethread.
experience
Dr. Koldenda provided weekly updates and responded to all questions in a timely manner. He also encouraged students to become involved in course content and share additional materials and articles that were relevant to the course. He also included Covid-19 related material which was beneficial in understanding how pandemic response is relevant in policy studies.

I wouldn't say that the Voice Threads is not valuable, I just have been unable to utilize this functionality as I would have liked.
Felt there was too much content for a short class where students are also employed full time. The workload felt more overwhelming than previous courses.

Comments
The reading was very significant in understanding the course, but the book Weimer was a little bit hard and heavy. Fewer examples and a lot of uncertain sentences.

discussing
Professor Kolenda actively engages with all of the students in weekly discussions and encourages participation by leading the way with his own.
I enjoyed how Dr. Kolenda incorporated discussion posts where classmates were able to interact with each other. I also appreciated how he included a discussion forum for questions as some of my questions were posed by other students and each of us were able to see the responses.

It would be better if the course will be taught in person

No, the form is sufficient and to the point.
